

News from New Charter – 25th March 2007

Never too old to learn...

New Charter Housing has recently organised an IT training session for some of their elderly residents.

The 'Silver Surfers' who live in sheltered accommodation, the eldest being 93 and the youngest 65 went to the high-tech HQ in Tameside to learn all about emails, the worldwide web and much more.

After the training, the students remarked on how much fun they'd had, practicing their new found skill and that they will continue to use email and computer technology back home with other residents.

Hannah Grantham – Learning Centre Co-ordinator from New Charter plans to run further sessions at each of New Charter's 22 Sheltered Housing Schemes and to keep momentum going for this new world of technology for customers.

Silver surfer (James Fowler who shows you are never too old to learn at 65).

Contacts – David Rigby or Paula Thomas 0161 331 2131